What is the TTI Emotional Quotient?

Our first reaction to any stimulus is an emotional one. These emotions can both colour and distort our thinking and decision making. Our ability to recognise and manage our emotions is called Emotional Intelligence. Emotional Intelligence has been said to be the fundamental difference in superior decision making and performance.

The TTI Emotional Quotient Report has been designed to give you an overview of your Emotional Intelligence based on the 5 fundamental pillars of Emotional Intelligence.

1. Self-Awareness: Being aware of your own emotions.
2. Self-Regulation: Being able to manage your emotions (to positive outcomes).
3. Motivation: Taking responsibility for your own motivation.
4. Empathy: Being aware of other's emotions (and emotional states at any one point in time).
5. Social Skills: Being able to coach positive emotions and positive outcomes in others.
